NUMBER 40

HENRY R. PREWITT

Is Chairman--Ben Johnson Made Secretary of the Democratic Campaign Committee.

Louisville, Sept. 3.—At a meeting of the Democratic state central committee at 1 today, Henry R. Prewitt was placed at the head of the campaign committee and Ben Johnson was made secretary. The headquarters of the state committee were removed from Lexington to Louisville.

With Mr. Prewitt in charge of the campaign and Mr. Johnson as secretary to direct the work of organizing the state, it is believed that Kentucky will give an old-time majority at the election this fall. The committee will make an especially hard fight to carry both houses of the general assembly. The campaign committee, which has charge of the campaign from now on, is changed considerably from the committee first named at Lexington when the affairs of the party were placed in the hands of a subcommittee, of which Senator Thomas A. Combs, of Lexington, was chairman. The action taken today means that all differences within the Democratic party have been adjusted and everything is now working smoothly toward success at the polls in November.

The committee meeting today was fully attended and, after some routine business was transacted, the following resolution was offered and adopted:

"Be it resolved by the state central committee, That the following named gentlemen be, and they are hereby, designated to conduct the campaign for the year 1909: H. R. Prewitt, Thomas A. Combs, Allie W. Young, Ollie James, William Addams, J. A. Sullivan, W. A. Berry, J. C. C. Mayo and Ben Johnson.

"The Hon. H. R. Prewitt is hereby designated as chairman of said campaign committee and the Hon. Ben Johnson is hereby designated as secretary thereof. Said committee is authorized to do any and all things that may be necessary for the proper conduct of said campaign. The city of Louisville is hereby designated as the headquarters of said campaign committee."

New Millinery Store.

Misses Ellen Wathen and Eddie Shader have opened a millinery store in the Graves property, on Main street, opposite the Presbyterian church. They have bought a complete line of fall and winter millinery and are now ready for business. Misses Wathen and Shader are popular young women of this place and having a good many years' experience in the millinery business will, no doubt, enjoy a liberal patronage. Misses Mae Curry and Alice McElroy have been employed to assist the new firm.

The new firm will be known as Wathen & Shader, and The Sun wishes them success in their new undertaking.

Store Burns.

The store of Linton & Chestnut at Phillipsburg was completely destroyed by fire last Saturday night about 9 o'clock. It is not known how the fire originated. The stock was valued at $1,800 and on it was carried $1,000 insurance. The building was valued at $400, with no insurance. The firm was a comparatively new one, both members having moved to Phillipsburg from Washington county a few months ago. Lebanon Enterprise.

Serious Accident.

Harry Shultz, one of Springfield's most popular young men and one of the best known athletes of Central Kentucky, was the victim of a peculiar and serious accident Friday night. Mr. Shultz was a passenger on the 7:05 p. m. train and, with several companions, was standing on the platform of the coach in which he had been riding, preparatory to alighting when the train stopped. When the train whistle sounded for the power house crossing Mr. Shultz thinking that it was for town started to alight. When he put his foot out, however, it hit against the cattle guard just above the power house, bruising and cutting it severely. It was found necessary to take half a dozen stitches before the wound was sewed. Harry is doing well although confined to his home, and it is hoped by his friends that he will enjoy a speedy recovery and suffer no permanent ill effects from the injury.

TATHAM SPRINGS.

An Ideal Place for Health, Pleasure and Real Comfort.

Tatham Springs is holding its own most admirably among the Kentucky summer resorts. Never in its history has the hotel been graver than this summer, and last week the editor of the Herald found it full of delightful people. Mrs. Wornell, who has been the hostess at the springs for so many years, is still in charge, and she certainly leaves nothing undone for the pleasure and comfort of her guests. Those who know the springs will be glad to learn she is now negotiating for the purchase of the hotel, and it is needless to predict that should she become the owner Tatham Springs will be even more of a favorite as a resort than it is now. The two accommodating clerks at the hotel are Messrs. Bob Russell and James Shultz, of Springfield, and they are as capable and accommodating as one can find anywhere. The management is looking for the biggest crowd in September of any time during the summer. A large party from Louisville have already engaged rooms. Dancing and bathing are favorite pastimes. The mill-pond near the hotel has been converted into an admirable bathing pool, and here the ladies and children enjoy themselves most thoroughly. Among the guests at the hotel last week were Dr. and Mrs. R. C. McChord, of Lebanon, both great favorites. Dr. McChord was in such demand for a dancing partner that one evening he actually went to bed to escape the fair dancers who pursued him. But the scheme failed, for a bevy of pretty girls besieged his room and he was dragged out. In dressing gown and slippers, and made to dance until, like Cinderella, he lost his shoe. Dr. and Mrs. V. A. Katterbach and daughter, of Frankfort, were also popular guests, as were Mrs. and Miss Pargry, of Louisville, who have just returned from an extended tour of the old world. Mrs. Muir, of Bardonia; Mr. and Mrs. Lowry, of Jessamine county, and Misses Dot and Mamie Bowick, of Louisville, were charming additions to the list of guests. The two latter would certainly have been the winners in a popularity contest had such a thing been inaugurated at the springs. Jolly Tom Connelly, of Bardonia, was a general favorite also, not only among the men but the women, who reserved their warmest welcome for him whenever he joined the crowd.

If anybody wants to be refreshed, in both body and mind, he needs only to go to Tatham Springs and he has taken a sip of the fountain of eternal youth. —Harrodsburg Herald.

NORTH POLE DISCOVERED

Dr. F. A. Cook and Commander R. E. Peary Have Both Been There—Ends Quest Of Years.

Great achievements in the world of science and exploration have been announced within the last week. A fortnight ago to the world the north pole was but a dream, its discovery reckoned almost an impossibility. It had been sought for scores of years at the cost of many lives and the expenditure of vast sums of money. The danger and hardships incident to reaching it were so great that the world had almost given up hope of discovering the pole for years to come when the news was flashed to the four quarters of the globe that Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the noted Brooklyn explorer, had reached the highest point of the earth's surface, to be followed within less than five days that Commander Robert E. Peary had achieved the same feat.

Peary is now on his way home and no details of his discovery have reached civilization save that in April, 1909, he reached the pole. The story told by Cook, however, is thrilling in the extreme, and is filled with the hardships and privations suffered by himself and Esquimo companions in the Northern ice fields. Dr. Cook claims to have discovered the pole in April, 1908, or one year prior to the time of Peary's arrival there, and that on the date of discovery he planted the American flag on the top of the earth.

The scientific world is waiting with intense interest for the data and information gathered by Dr. Cook and Commander Peary in the Arctic regions.

Both Cook and Peary are noted explorers and for years their highest ambition has been to reach the pole. They had devoted their life to this and both will receive the world's plaudits.

GLOBE TROTTER

Mr. John Caldwell, Known to Hundreds of Printing Offices, Helping The Sun.—Well Known Here.

The Sun is being assisted this week by Mr. John H. Caldwell, who for a long time lived here and who is known to the newspaper fraternity from one end of this country to the other as one of its finest printers and best fellows.

Thirty-four years ago, when the late Warren Cunningham was publishing the Washington County Herald, Mr. Caldwell worked for him. Leaving here, he has traveled throughout the land, and at one time had the reputation of being one of the fastest type setters in the country.

If Mr. Caldwell were working at a place of which he had wearied and the next train was several hours late, he did not humer the poor railroad company by waiting for the Pullman accommodation, but begin to count ties or make cross-country runs. In spite of this kind of life, or because of it, as the case may be, Mr. Caldwell is splendidly preserved and still the peer of type-setters.

Mr. Caldwell is a brother of Dr. D. O. Polin's second wife, who is so kindly remembered by Springfield people.

When the Frost Is on the Punkin.

When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock,
And you hear the tyock and gobble of the struttin' turkey-cock,
And the clackin' of the guineys, and the cluckin' of the hens,
And the rooster's hallyoyer as he tiptoes on the fence;
Oh, it's there's the times a feller is a-feelin' at his best,
With the rain's sun to greet him from a night of peaceful rest,
As he leaves the house, bareheaded, and goes out to feed the stock,
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

They's somethin' kindo harty-like about the atmosphere
When the heat of summer's over and the coolin' fall is here.
Of course we miss the flowers, and the blossoms on the trees,
And the humm'n' of the humm'n'-birds and buzzin' of the bees,
But the air's so appetizin', and the landscape through the haze
Of a crisp and sunny mornin' of the airy autumn days
Is a pictur' that no painter has the colors 'n' the shock.
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

The husky, rusty rassel of the tossels of the corn,
And the raspin' of the tangled leaves, as golden as the morn;
The stubble in the furries—kindo lonesome-like but still
A-preschin' sermons to us of the barn they grewed to fill.
The straw stack in the meadow, and the resper in the shed;
The hoses in their stalls below—the clover overhead!
Oh, it sets my hart a-clicken' like the ticken' of a clock
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

Then your apples all is gathered, and the ones a feller keeps
Are round the cider-makin' in red and yellow heaps;
And your cider-makin' 'a over, and your women-folks is through
With their mess and apple-butter, and their souse and sausage, too,
And you see the leaves a-floatin' in the air of every way,
As the Angels wantin' bordin', and they'd call around on me—
I'd want to 'commode' 'em—all the whole-injurin' flock—
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock!
—James Whitcomb Riley.

September in Kentucky.

There's something in the atmosphere, in sweet September days,
That mingles all the landscape with its languid, dreamy haze,
And you see the leaves a-floatin' in the air of every way,
Where the maple trees are standing, in their summer-time array.

There's a yellowish tinge a-creeping over nature's emerald sheen,
And the cattle stand, half-sleeping, in the middle of the stream,
Where the glassy pool is shaded by the over-hanging limb,
And the pebbly bottom's glistening where the silvery minnows swim.

The tasseled corn is nodding, and the crow on drowsy wing
Is sailing o'er the orchard where the ripening apples swing.
And the fleecy clouds are floating in the sky of every day,
And the gentle breeze is sighing as it idly wafts by.

The cantaloupes are ripening in their yellow, golden rinds,
And the melons, round and juicy, are a-clinging to the vines,
And the merry, laughing children, in their happy hour of play,
Are a-somping in the meadow and a-sliding down the hay.

The busy bees are buzzing where the grapes with purple blush,
And the hanging bunches tempting with their weight the arbor crush,
And the blue jays are a-wrangling in the wood across the road,
Where the hickory boughs are bending 'neath an extra heavy load.

O, but you may just keep on a singing about the springtime ray,
With its blossoms and its flowers in the meadow month of May,
But the early autumn splendor, with its sweet September days,
Eclipses boasted springtime in a thousand kinds of ways!

—G. W. D. in Danville Advocate.

Shader--Conroy.

This morning at 9:30 o'clock Mr. Alphonse L. Shader and Miss Genevieve M. Conroy were united in marriage in Louisville, Ky., Rev. Father White performing the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Shader have left for a bridal trip to New York and Washington City to be gone till Sept. 25th, after which they will make their home in Louisville.

Mr. Shader is well known here, having been brakeman on the mixed train since shortly after the L. & N. was extended to this place. He is a nephew of Mr. J. A. Shader.

Stanfield--Yankey.

Miss Fannie Stanfield, of Hardin's creek, and Mr. Mack Yankey, of Simmamtown, were quietly married at the home of Mr. R. C. Canary Monday morning. Rev. W. H. Williams performing the ceremony.

The announcement of the wedding came as quite a surprise to the friends of the young people. The bride had been the guest of Mr. Canary and family for several days, and had not given to them nor to any of her friends any intimation that she was to be married until Monday morning, when Mr. Yankey, accompanied by the minister, drove up to Mr. Canary's and the ceremony was performed.

Mrs. Yankey is the daughter of Mr. O. C. Stanfield, while Mr. Yankey is the son of Mr. Lud Yankey. Both are popular young people, to whom The Sun extends its congratulations.

A Great Treat.

The greatest treat afforded the music-lovers of Springfield was the concert given at the opera-house last week by Miss Edith Rubel, of Lebanon, violinist, and Mr. Karl Schmidt, of Louisville, cellist. Both Miss Rubel and Mr. Schmidt are artists and have received the highest meed of praise from the music centers of this country and should have been heard by a larger audience than gathered Thursday night. A more appreciative audience, however, could not have been drawn together.

Several selections from "The Merry Widow" were given and were greatly enjoyed. Miss Rubel was probably at her best in the Gypsy airs which she played. "Traumerlei," played on the cello by Mr. Schmidt, was also enthusiastically received. Miss Jessica Rubel played the accompaniments.

Taken all in all, the selection of the program, the execution of the music, etc., the concert could hardly be improved upon.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE

Six Principal Business Houses and Their Contents and the Baptist Church a Mass of Ruins.

Shelbville Sentinel: At about 3:15 o'clock this morning fire was discovered in the building of the Shannon & Sledd Co.'s undertaking and furniture establishment. For magnitude, it eclipses anything in the history of this city. The loss was total wherever the flames touched, and embraced the buildings and contents of the following firms: Shannon Sledd Co., Bemis, R. A. Campbell, M. Lynch, J. J. Ramsey & Bro., and Caldwell & Harbison.

All the warehouses in the rear of the above named firms, and the turkey pen in the rear of Smith McKenney were also destroyed, as was the Bullock property where the Express Co. has its office.

The principal building was the Baptist church, which was burned to the ground, entailing a very heavy loss since there was not a dollar of insurance upon it.

The wind was westward, and carried the flames from its starting point to the walls of the S. A. Middleton & Son's building. Here it was stopped by the high wall and the manful efforts of the firemen and the protection that the wall gave.

A call for help to Louisville was made about 4:30 o'clock by Mayor T. R. Bland and in about an hour several hundred feet of hose arrived.

The estimated loss will reach $250,000. We are unable to ascertain the amount of insurance at this hour, but it will not cover the damage. Besides the church the heaviest losses are the buildings and contents of Caldwell & Harbison, J. J. Ramsey & Bro., R. A. Campbell and Shannon Sledd Co.

By reason of the wind constantly blowing away from the Hall Block it was injured only partially despite the fact that the fire started next door.

The cause of the fire could not be ascertained but it occurred in the neighborhood of about the middle of the store-room of Shannon & Sledd Co.

The insurance on the stock of M. Lynch is said to have expired a few days ago and but one policy for $1,000 was renewed, making his loss quite heavy.

In the same locality of the present fire in the 70's one of the largest fires of the city occurred. At that time three or four firms were burnt out.

The Baptist church is an historic old landmark. It was built in 1859 and was for many years the finest church of the county. The passing of this structure will cause quite a deep regret, independent of its loss in dollars, on account of the many cherished memories that cluster around it for a half century of existence.

Buried at Pleasant Run.

Mrs. Parke Thurman, widow of the late E. T. Thurman, died Wednesday afternoon. Her death was due to a stroke of paralysis which visited her only a few hours before. Her remains were interred at Pleasant Run yesterday afternoon. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Sam Payne, and two sons, Blanford and Will Thurman, to whom many friends extend sincere sympathy. —Lebanon Enterprise.

FARM AND STOCK

Items of Interest to Farmers and Live Stock and Poultry Raisers.

Where blight affects trees it is recommended that the treated limbs and fruit be removed and burned.

Dust is the greatest enemy to wholesome milk. Keep down the dust in the milking stables.

The old brood sow should be kept as long as she remains vigorous. She shows better how to raise her suckling pigs than the younger mother.

The California law requiring all cold storage eggs to be so labeled is attracting attention and will likely be copied by other States.

Stock up your incubators when eggs are cheap and thus have a hatch or two of chickens coming on when both eggs and chickens are high.

It is said to be a good thing when ants are found on plants, to look for plant lice and spray with kerosene emulsion.

It has been recommended that the traffic in horned toads be stopped, the reason being their usefulness in destroying insects.

The man who produces nothing but the best is going to come much nearer getting his price than he who produces poorer stuff.

Germany's acreage in potatoes reaches the enormous number of 8,000,000. The production varies from 40,000,000 to 45,000,000 tons a season.

The poultry raiser for the market makes a mistake to feed his cockerels during the winter. Selling them on the first rise in fall prices is a more profitable plan.

Flaxseed fed carefully will keep the soil's cast in fine condition, bowels free, and will promote an even development to the muscles of the legs and the whole body.

Twenty minutes every other day with a tea kettle of scalding hot water poured over the drinking fountains and feed troughs will keep down disease germs this hot weather.

If possible have your poultry yard slope to the south, and don't locate it in the woods where there is too much shade and dampness and where droppings can not be used to advantage in the production of green food.

Poultry should be given as much attention as any branch of the farm's income. It should be studied as carefully as dairying or hog raising and the farmer will find his profits from this source are not inconsiderable.

New collars should be examined every day until they are found to fit the horse's neck perfectly. A fat horse often shrinks in the first few days' work sufficiently to make the collar fit him badly and produce serious injury.

Word comes from the West that Luther Burbank is experimenting to produce a seedless watermelon. Melon raisers are considering the proposition of petitioning him to stop where he is so far as changing the interior of the melon is concerned and bend his energies toward producing not a seedless watermelon but a "stealthy" one.

One of the poorest investments a man can make is to buy poor tools. Get the best, and then give them the best of care. A man would hardly leave a sum of money along the fence row, out in the weather, yet when he leaves his tools unprotected in the field it amounts to almost the same thing.

As the grass and weeds are tall now, owing to extra rains, lumber neck may be expected if dead chicks are allowed on the range or runs. The tall weeds and grass easily hide the dead chicks. Weak ones often drop over during the day and are not found except by their marks. Result: lumber neck.

For a spray or paint to be applied to roosting boards, nest boxes or walls and floor of the hen houses, try the following preparation. Three parts of kerosene and one part crude carbolic acid. This is stirred up when used and may be applied with any of the hand spray pumps or with a brush.

One of the important jobs for August and September is getting some green feed started for late fall and entire winter. Too many people neglect to prepare green feed and must depend on feeding chopped up clover or alfalfa hay. These are good but nothing can take the place of some real good feed for the flock to pick over on bright sunny days.

The winter laying hen must be started early in spring, hatched well, fed right, and kept in condition. Hens should lay every month in the year and if their surroundings are favorable and fed properly balanced feed, the feathers will fall out so fast at a time and the new ones come so evenly that you will never notice much loss of vigor.

Lumber neck is not contagious but the sick birds should be confined in a dry, cool place. Feed soft, nutritious feeds. A drop of turpentine in a teaspoonful of feed is recommended by some. A piece of gum asafetida half the size of a pea for a grown fowl daily has proven a successful treatment for others. Mashed onions with stale bread wet up with milk is also recommended.

The worst kind of a roost is the stender roost. When fowls are on different levels there is always more or less crowding and over-heating, also general confusion at roosting time with every bird trying to reach the highest point. Fowls of heavy breeds are nearly certain to injure their feet flying down from a high roost to a hard floor; very heavy birds are unable to fly up. Young chicks should not have roosts higher than a foot from the ground; eighteen inches is high enough for the older birds. If a dropping board is used have it about eight inches below the roosts. Make the roosts of wide boards, slightly rounded at the top. If the roosts are not used the birds should be kept in small flocks; not over ten if possible.

LATE HATCHES.

The latter part of August, if cool, is a good time to start a fall hatch. If the weather is hot, it should be delayed into September. Fall hatches depend a great deal on the weather of the fall and early winter months. If the weather is nice and open a limited number of fall chicks will thrive and pay for their trouble and keep. However, if the weather is rainy and cold in November and early December, unless you have brood houses and give the chicks special care, the chicks shiver and "cheep" around, will be stunted, and not worth their keep. A few late chicks come in handy for home use and can be raised profitably, but there are too many "ifs" to make them a profitable market proposition.

NO MORE HOG CHOLERA.

The spray or paint of cholera serum conducted at the Kansas City Stock yards was concluded last week and is pronounced a perfect success as a preventative of hog cholera. The test was conducted by experts under the rigid supervision of a government specialist.

Of a poison squad of thirty-five hogs thirteen which were not immunized at the beginning of the test are dead and twenty-two which were treated are perfectly healthy in an isolated pen.

Every conceivable form of cholera exposure was placed in the way of the twenty-two hogs which survived and the thirteen which were victims of the disease died in pens with the twenty-two hogs immunized at various times during the progress of the tests. Even the carcasses of the dead hogs were allowed to remain in the pens of the immunized hogs sometimes two or three days.

Every opportunity was given the twenty-two to catch the disease, and it was said that under normal conditions every hog would have succumbed. The fact that the twenty-two did not die taken as absolute proof that the new serum is a success and an unfailing preventative of cholera among hogs.

A Sprained Ankle.

As usually treated a sprained ankle will disable the injured person for a month or more, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment and by observing the directions with each bottle faithfully, a cure may, in most cases, be effected in less than one week's time. This liniment is a most remarkable preparation; try it for a sprain or a bruise, or when laid up with chronic or muscular rheumatism, and you are certain to be delighted with the prompt relief which it affords. Heart Troubles

The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. It often happens that a person is born with a weak heart. Then again disease, fevers, over-exertion, anxiety, nervousness, rheumatism, etc. weaken the heart. The result is shortness of breath, palpitation, pain in the heart, or in some of the nerves of the chest or abdomen. The heart should be strengthened with a tonic, and for this nothing equals Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I had LaGrippe last fall as I thought in a mild form. I was weak, tired, and short of breath; could hardly go about, and a good deal of the time sort of an asthmatic breathing and extremely nervous. I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine and now I feel so much better in every way. I am so thankful that I began taking this medicine, and shall not hesitate to tell others how much good it has done."

Fine Farms Sold.

Mr. Robt. M. Thompson, who has been manager of the Grundy Home estate for several years, during the past week purchased two of the best farms in Washington county. One was the farm of Mr. J. R. Durrett and the other the farm of Mr. Jim Willett. For the former $6,000 was paid, while the consideration for the latter was $65 per acre. Mr. Durrett's farm is known as the old Tom Brown place and Mr. Willett's as the old Thompson place.

A Master of Aviation.
Orville Wright, who recently remained in the air at Fort Myer, Va., seventy-two minutes and forty seconds, carrying Lieutenant Lahm of the signal corps as a passenger, tackled a new record to his long string of aerial performances. The best previous record was made by Wilbur Wright last year at Le Mans, France, when he carried a passenger for 1 hour 9 minutes 31 seconds. Incidentally Orville more than met the government requirements for carrying power and in a later effort for speed in straightaway flight. Before his record breaking achievement the best that Orville Wright had been able to accomplish with a passenger aboard was 9 minutes 13 seconds. This was during a trial flight made over the Fort Myer drill ground.

ORVILLE WRIGHT.

On Sept. 12, 1908, when he circled the Bell for a distance of 5.88 miles with Major George O. Squire of the army as his passenger.

It was in attempting to better this flight that he met with the accident on Sept. 17, 1908, which resulted in the death of Lieutenant Thomas E. Selfridge of the signal corps and in serious injury to himself.

On this occasion the machine, after completing two circuits of the drill ground, was dashed to earth from a height of several feet by the breaking of one of the propeller blades.

For catalog, entry blank or other information, write J. W. Newman, Secretary, 350 Paul Jones Building, Louisville, Ky.

The Robertson-Claybrooke Co.
INCORPORATED

HARDIN'S CREEK.

Your correspondent attended court at Springfield, or, rather, spent Monday in that town. There was a fairly good crowd there, but when the court-house bell rang at 1:30 o'clock we found that crowd large indeed. Hon. I. H. Thurman addressed those present for quite a while in words and argument that cannot be excelled, at least in my opinion, by any other man in the country. He was a "two-by-four" talk and did not amount to much. The professor may be quite proficient in book learning, but is evidently very poor when it comes to politics; so we will let him pass and still think of him according to scripture, which says: "See a man wise in his own conceit, for there is more hope for the fool than for him." Have read the Lebanon Leader, which boasts that it is the only Republican paper in Central Kentucky. (We have reliable information that when Mr. Johnston made that assertion there really existed two other papers of the same faith and order that were really printed and owned by sure-enough Republicans.) We thought possibly Mr. John W. Lewis, with all his college learning and blue blood, would at least address the people according to Augustus E. Wilson's style of words and message of good cheer and government, but was soon convinced the honorable gentleman would not stand the test. I just suppose he, as many others knew, that facts published by the so-called "only Republican newspaper in Central Kentucky" was like unto a white sepulchre—full within of rottenness and decayed matter. After Mr. Thurman's speech we walked about the town, thinking possibly we might get at least near enough to the college-bred and noted Republican from the old home in Green that we might touch the hem of his garment and receive some of the virtues that might exist thereon. We failed to see him, so walked down to the postoffice of the town, where we beheld Billy Waters and another companion with Mr. Lewis, who seemed wrought up to a red heat, while Billy and his friend were trying to get the college-bred man's condition down to a normal "judicial temperament."

W. D. Smith sold to W. D. Claybrooke, of Springfield, a pair of two-year-old horse mules for $320.

Don McLean sold to C. A. Blandford 24 ewes for $125, and also sold to Proc Blandford one sow and pigs for $25.
Mrs. Alma Vise, of Illinois, is visiting her parents, Mr. S. L. Cambron and wife, near Blincoe.
Mr. J. E. Hagan, of Booker, Ky., visited his sister, Mrs. James Stanfield, Saturday.
Mr. M. V. Hays and wife spent Sunday with Mr. Hays' father near Bond, Ky.
Mr. Martin Spalding and Mrs. W. E. Spalding, of McIntire, Ky., spent Sunday with the family of Don McLean.
Miss Alice Simmona, of Louisville, after a week's visit with relatives in this community, has returned home.
Mr. Wesley Medley, of St. Louis, is visiting his parents, Mr. R. Medley and wife.
Mrs. Mabel McIntyre, after a prolonged visit to friends at Woodlawn and Bloomfield, has returned to her home here.—Mack in Maroon Falcon.

Republican Convention.

The Republican mass convention of Saturday, held for the purpose of nominating candidates for the county offices, was attended by a fair-sized crowd of county Republicans. The convention was called to order by County Chairman W. F. Grigsby, after which nominations were called for for the different county offices. There being no candidate for any other office, Butler Barlow placed in nomination for representative in the Kentucky legislature E. P. Dedman, of Williamsburg. Mr. Dedman being the only candidate, he was unanimously nominated, and, in a short speech, accepted the nomination, predicting that he would in November be elected. Hon. John W. Lewis was called upon and also addressed the convention.

The convention clearly demonstrated that the Republicans recognize the strength of the Democratic county ticket and do not care to run against it merely for the sake of running.

Ending a Letter.
The simplicity of "You're" as a letter ending would have astounded Jeremy Taylor, whose letters to John Evelyn often wind up with perfect triumphs of complexity in this respect. His best is, "Believe me that I am, in great heartiness and earnestness of affection, dear sir, your obliged and most affectionate and endeared friend and servant." or "Your very affectionate friend and hearty servant." Even in his shortest perorations of the kind the "affectionate" and the "servant" are always the two indispensable words. Probably no man, woman or child would combine these two at the end of a letter today.—London Tatler.

A Division of Labor.
The following dialogue at the Bow county court deserves to be recorded: Witness—One day I had some shrimps to sell, and I asked the plaintiff to help me. He said, "I can't push the barrow because my arm is bad, but if you like I'll come along with you and hold it."
Counsel—Why was that?
Witness—Well, it's like this, sir. A man can often ask when he can't shove.—London News.

Unreasonable.
"Your baby cries a great deal at night. Can't you do anything for it?"
"Your dog barks a good deal. Can't you do anything to stop him?"
"Confound it, that unreasonable people as you haven't any right to live in a flat!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Result the Same.
"Glimpse some of that prune pie."
"Son, you've had two kinds of pie already."
"Then another kind won't matter. There's only one kind of stomach ache!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Reasonable Request.
"Arabella," said old Billings as he finished his dinner, "I am going to ask you to do me a favor. I want you to give your young man—Mr. Walsingham—a message from me."
Arabella blushed and looked down at her plate.
"Tell him," the bluff old millionaire went on, "that I don't object to his staying here and running up my gas bills, but that I do object to his carrying the morning paper away with him when he leaves."—London Answers.

Force of Habit.
"I'm surprised that you should be so interested in watching those silly duddes."
"Force of habit, I guess. I'm president of a real estate improvement company."
"Well, they're a vacant lot."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Lost and Found.
"Found a dollar yesterday."
"Lucky boy."
"Not so lucky. In stooping to pick it up I dropped and broke my eyes."—Kansas City Journal.

Public Sale

Farm, Live Stock, Farming Implements, Etc.

On account of a change in business of my sons and myself, which is my only reason for selling, I will offer at public auction on the premises on

Thursday, Sept. 16, '09

AT 10 O'CLOCK, A. M.

My Fine Blue Grass Farm, Containing 273 acres

To be surveyed to purchaser, located five miles east of Harrodsburg, three miles north of Burgin and two miles west of Shakertown, on the Chatham pike, adjoining the Lexington pike. This is one of the finest agricultural and stock farms in Kentucky. It is probably the best watered place in the blue grass country, every field on the place being abundantly supplied with never-failing water. The place is fertile and superior for the cultivation of tobacco, hemp, corn and wheat. The farm is equipped for tobacco raising with two big barns. The stock barn is second to none. 150 acres are in blue grass and the remainder in a high state of cultivation. The dwelling contains eight large rooms, large veranda and is surrounded by all necessary outbuildings.

TERMS—One-third cash and the remainder in 1, 2, 3 and 4 years with six per cent interest, payable semi-annually, from date of deed.

Will sell at same time and place the following stock: Six head of big mule mules, sixty head of cattle, Jersey Cattle, two ewes, and besides farming machinery, such as binders, mowers, wagons, plows, harrows, and many other things too numerous to mention. Terms on personal property: On all sums of $20 and under, cash, over that amount a four months' negotiable note without interest.

BURGON ON THE GROUND, AND A PLENTY OF IT.

A FINE OUTING.

Tenting on the Kentucky State Fair Grounds.

Arrangements have been made for those who want to take a week's outing to have their own tent upon the State Fair grounds. Persons desiring a tent should write to Secretary Newman of Louisville, Ky., and notify him, and tents can be secured and furnished to visitors at actual cost. Many persons have an idea that they can take in the entire Fair in one day, when in fact six days can be very profitably spent in studying the various exhibits that will be upon the grounds. Many for the first time visiting the State Fair for one day, leave with the determination to come again the next year and spend several days and make their arrangements accordingly.

ADVANTAGE TO FARMERS.

Equity and Grange Headquarters at the Kentucky State Fair. The Kentucky State Fair management for the week of Sept. 13-18 has provided a tent to be known as Equity Headquarters, and also one to be known as Grange Headquarters, for the use of members of these organizations, free of cost. It is to be hoped the farmers will make use of the accommodations provided for them and feel perfectly at home during the fair week.

AN ENERGETIC FORCE.

The Organization of the Kentucky State Fair Work.

Few realize the amount of labor and the amount of organization that it takes to put on a State Fair. On September 13th at Louisville will be opened the seventh annual Kentucky State Fair. Visitors will find on exhibition the best specimens of practically every product of the state. To collect these exhibits and to systemize them so as to have everything ready for inspection and to operate the same for six days, costs about $50,000. First comes the secretary, who is charged with the responsibility of getting everything in readiness together with a large clerical force, then the heads of each department, which is always some member of the State Board of Agriculture, with superintendents and assistants sufficient to look after each exhibit: a force of watchmen, guards, ticket sellers and laborers, etc., until if the whole force were gathered together it would represent a good-sized army. Each person is adapted to handle his particular work, and no more system is required in any great industrial plant than in an exhibition of such magnitude. It was through this thoroughly organized force that all the details of last year's fair was worked out in such an incredibly short time. And the energy displayed by such a force is one of the interesting things to be noted at a state fair.

Pain's Fireworks at the State Fair. The State Fair will again have Pain's Fireworks as a night attraction. Novelties in fireworks not heretofore seen will be introduced and a magnificent display of forty numbers will be given each night, including such devices as "The Weird White Falls" on a gigantic scale, 200 feet long and 25 feet high. Also, a wonderful device known as "Fighting the Flames," showing a house burning, with the fire engine playing water upon the flames, all done in fireworks. Monster portraits of well-known people. The Pain company will also put on a wonderful new device known as "The Pillar of Light," showing a pillar of fire of intense brilliancy rising fifty feet in the air, making the entire surroundings as bright as day.

In connection with the fireworks there will be provided entertainment by noted specialty artists, and a big concert each night by the band, making a most charming evening and one long to be remembered.

Tobacco at the State Fair.

A most liberal premium list is offered for tobacco and a large and valuable exhibit is expected. Classes are provided for the following Burley types: Red Leaf, Bright Leaf, Cigarette Wrapper and Bright Trash. The dark types are Black Wrapper, Long or African Leaf, French Leaf, Italian Leaf, Green River Leaf and Stemming Leaf, in addition to the regular prize. Hon. M. C. Rankin offers $75 in specials for the best display of Burley crop, best display of Dark Tobacco and the best display of Green River Tobacco. Not more than four samples can be entered of a single crop, but if exhibitor has more than one crop raised on his farm he is entitled to four samples out of each crop.

Horse Show at the State Fair.

At every fair, whether big or little, in Kentucky, the horse show is one of the predominant features, and the Kentucky State Fair of 1909 will be no exception. With one of the most attractive classifications ever offered at a Southern fair, with high class judges to tie the ribbons and the best covered show arena in the world, there should be horses enough and of choice quality at this show. As the horse exhibit can usually be depended upon to take care of itself, it is believed that with the addition of the slight show feature an unusual array of equine celebrities will be paraded before the public.

MR. BRYAN'S PLANS

In response to repeated demands, coming from every portion of the United States, Mr. Bryan will conduct a vigorous Campaign of Education through The Commonsense, and assist in the organization of "An educational club in every township." This campaign will promote the work of education among the voters on all political questions affecting the American people. To advance this educational campaign, each issue of The Commonsense will contain a special article on some pertinent political subject, designed to present, in an easily understood manner, the facts of the case, to give valuable statistical data, to carefully analyze the opposing arguments, and to discuss their application to present-day conditions. The following subjects and others, upon which all Americans should be accurately informed, will be discussed: The Tariff by schedules as it affects the individual; Postal Savings Banks; Imperialism; Colonialism; The Rights of the States; Federalism; Primary Laws; Inheritance Tax; Initiative and Referendum; Recall of Public Officials; Commutation of Sentence; National Bankruptcy; The Trust Question; Regulation of Railroads and Other Corporations; Popular Election of Senators; Income Tax. This series will afford a vast fund of political information for any citizen regardless of party affiliation, provide excellent material for all students of economic questions, and will be a valuable compendium of politics for schools and debating societies.

FREE BOOKS FOR EVERYONE

The Commonsense, to start this campaign of education, and to place this series of articles in the hands of as many voters as possible, will give FREE books:

A Fugitive and a Romance That Started at the Mine.

By ANNA R. COVINGTON.
(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

He had come up into the land of the unsalted seas with a look in his eyes as of one pursued. He sought and obtained work underground as a miner. He had but one purpose—to avoid recognition—and this place seemed so safe he did not mind the weariness and the monotony of the hard labor.

One night as the man came out of the underworld into the shaft house, its floor upon tier of dusky faced men, with their lamp lighted hats rising weirdly out of a dark throated tunnel, he was the last to leave the car. His usual first furtive glance fell upon a young woman with the form of a goddess and the face of a Madonna. She stood near a light, with its rays full upon her. She turned and made her way to the outer door. He opened it for her. She thanked him and passed out. It was dark, with the early darkness of winter, the sky was moonless and starless. She stood for a moment, bewildered by the strangeness of the scene. Then she started in the direction of a light streaming from an office window. She came back to him as he stood in the doorway.

"I beg your pardon, but I am a stranger here. Will you please direct me to the main street or to the main office?"

"You should go that way, past the engine house, then cross the railroad tracks to the street beyond."

"Thank you. I shall know my way as soon as I reach the street."

"It is rough, walking here. If you will permit me, I will walk with you. I have a lantern."

"I shall be very glad if you will do so," she replied gratefully.

They walked in Indian fashion until they had left the mines and had gained the beaten track of the highway. Then she walked beside her.

"It is all so wonderful to me here," she remarked.

"You do not live here, then?"

"No. I live near Boston. I am on a visit to my uncle, Captain Sloan, of the mining company. I wanted to see the man came up, but I missed uncle and came alone. You weren't on that car, were you?"

A DESPERATE GRIP ON THE DETECTIVE'S ANKLE.

"No. I work in the mine, getting out food for the furnaces."

"Isn't it hard life? You haven't always been a miner?" she half queried.

"He felt a little thrill of joy—his first in months. He had not, then, lost all trace of former environment."

"No," he said slowly. "Only since last September. One must live."

"Won't you come in and let my uncle thank you for your kindness to me?" she asked as he stopped in front of the captain's big white house.

"No, thank you," he replied seriously. "But the kindness was on your part in letting me come."

"I am going back to Boston tomorrow," she replied. "But I expect to spend next summer here, and I hope I may see you then."

She extended her hand as she spoke, and he touched it reverently. When she had gone into the house he noticed something white on the ground. It proved to be an envelope which had evidently fallen from her muff. By the light of his lantern he read the address, "Miss Marie Sloan." As it was empty, he could see no harm in keeping it.

Every night thereafter, when the man came up from the depths, he felt a little thrill of remembrance of his first glance that night when he had beheld her. His heart throbbled with the feeling that compels every man to strive anew to work out the best that is in him. It had seemed natural—almost ordained—that she should speak to him and that he should walk beside her. Their words had been commonplace. He scarce remembered them, except that she had known him to be above his work and that she was coming back next summer.

He began to formulate new plans. Later he left the mines and went to a distant city, where he stayed for a week. Then, regardless and dressed in correct clothes, he returned to the city of the mines. He applied for the position of bookkeeper, and was engaged to fill a vacancy.

When summer and Marie arrived he had made good in the office and had won a firm footing in the social strata of the community. By taking the tide in copper stocks at its flood he had secured a fair sized nest egg.

When he was introduced to Captain Sloan's office he had not the slightest remembrance of him. As the summer passed their friendship grew, linked by thoughts, inspirations and interests in common. At the first tints of autumn their engagement was announced.

Long ago she had told him of the miner who had been so kind to her and of the deep impression he had made upon her. Once she had gone to see the man come up, but she had failed to see him again.

"Some time," he thought, with a dread foreboding, "I must tell her all, but not now—not yet."

One day Sam Pack, a detective from Chicago, slipped quietly into town in search of a man who had eluded him for a year. In the afternoon he sauntered into the mine office.

"How are you, Lowden?" he said to the head bookkeeper, with a noticeable hesitation before the name.

He turned quickly and breathed quiveringly, or a moment later he said to the head bookkeeper, with a noticeable hesitation before the name.

"Can we go somewhere for a private interview?"

"Yes," said Jack dully.

"I think I'd like to visit the mines while I am here. Couldn't you take me down?"

"Yes," replied Jack heavily. "Come this way."

They were joined by one of the men and conversation was deferred.

"Oh, this is the way you go down?" said Pack, when they came to a shaft house and he looked with some dismay at the sliding steps that came and went in regular rapidity. "I thought there was a sort of cage or car?"

"Not in this shaft. The car is for the men. It's very simple if you stop as it comes. Stop whenever I do and only when I do."

There were wild plans revolting in Jack's mind, and he welcomed this descent into the lower regions. The detective didn't exactly like the situation, but he was brave, sure footed and ashamed to back out. As they began the descent he stepped precisely and fearlessly just as his guide did three or four times. Then—he never knew just how it happened—he hesitated, lost his head and his footing at the same time.

Jack's strong right arm, backed by the muscle of a miner, caught the unfortunate man by the ankle just as he was going down. With his little and sinewy left arm Jack clung to the beam, maintaining a desperate grip on the detective's ankle. There was an agonized space of time while he stood in this perilous position before the machinery stopped and the others came to his relief.

With aching, straining muscles, Jack walked back to the office and waited until the detective should revive. When he saw him coming he went outside to meet him.

"I am quite ready to go with you," he said, with a queer smile.

The detective started.

"If you were guilty do you suppose I would take you after what you did down there in the mine? I didn't come to take you. Your father engaged me to find you a year ago. Your brother confessed and is paying the penalty. It wasn't necessary for you to hide all these months."

"Still," said Jack, with flashing eyes and leaping heart, "I am glad that I did."

Homely Women.

Plain women exist and form a definite factor in our social economy. Not all of us are blessed with good features, soft eyes, a fine figure and a clear complexion. Some of us are born with dark skins, wide mouths and snub noses, and not all the arts of dress and toilet can make us pretty or even preactable. But, all the same, plain women live and thrive and new and then make brilliant marriages. In fact, one has only to use one's eyes to see that some ugly women have a far more certain wealth power of attraction. History teaches us this, for we are told in several instances of unconquered women who have ruled the destinies of men and nations. Catherine of Russia and Mme. de Maintenon had no looks, and Mary, queen of Scots, who has gone down to fame as a beauty, appears in her picture as thin, small eyed and hard featured. Indeed, only one portrait is said to exist in which she is shown as fair haired and lovely, and this hangs in Dulwich palace and belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch—London Strand Magazine.

All an Account of the Boats.

As a sergeant was hauling out his orders in a barracks in Dublin and watching the line of feet as the raw recruits endeavored to obey the words of command he found, to his astonishment, that one pair of feet, more noticeable on account of their extra large size, never turned.

Without taking his eyes off those feet the sergeant bawled out a second order.

"About face!"

He could see that all the feet except those he watched turned in obedience. Rushing up to the owner, a little fellow he acted him by the shoulder, shouting:

"Why don't you turn with the rest?"

"I did," replied the trembling recruit.

"You did, eh? Well, I watched your feet, and they never moved."

"It's the boots they gave me, sir," said the poor fellow. "They're so large that when I turn my feet turn inside of them."—London Answers.

LOCATING EVELYN.

A Search That Brought Happiness to Two Loving Hearts.

By FANNIE MEDBURY PENDLETON.

(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

John Bennett looked at his watch and yawned wearily. It was two hours before the eastbound train would leave Chicago. With an expression of boredom he strolled leisurely up the street, his eyes straying listlessly from side to side. He had the air of a man whose life has ceased to interest.

The hurrying crowds met and passed him. A pretty, fair haired girl brushed by, and he glanced at her with the quickening of sudden interest, then his face settled into his former expression.

Every light haired woman he met met for the past two months had gained from him that quick look. It had become a habit with the man, but he looked in vain for the face of Evelyn Chester.

They had met in Denver the latter part of the winter and had become engaged. She was traveling with her mother and father. The latter was in the last stages of an illness.

Finding no relief in the western climate, Mr. Chester had suddenly decided to return east by easy stages. They had no permanent home, and Evelyn, in view of this, had promised to write as soon as she had arrived in New York.

Weeks slipped by, then months, and still no word from Evelyn. Bennett had at last started west in the hope of getting some trace of the Chesters. The thought of Evelyn and her unaccountable silence was so constantly in his mind that the slight of every fair haired girl stirred his heart with a forlorn hope.

On his way up the street he had reached one of the moving picture theatrons, and, thinking that he might as well kill time in one way as another, he entered.

His performance had begun and he listened half heartedly to the illustrated song. His thoughts still on the vanished Evelyn. Had she repented of her promise to him? He could not believe that. Had she been swallowed up by some dreadful trouble? He must find her.

Bennett raised his eyes to the gleam of the song band and a panoramic view of the Massachusetts coast.

broad piazza Claude Aymer pounced upon him.

"Why, Bennett, old man," he cried, "how good of you! I thought you were in the wild and woolly west."

Bennett shook hands.

"I don't want you, Aymer," he cried, "I want your sister."

"Great shakes, man," he exclaimed, "don't try my luck with a girl on the banks of the historic Hudson! Besides, Elsie's engaged."

There was an amused laugh from a tall girl in white, who rose from hammock and came forward with hand cordially outstretched. Bennett regarded her with silent anxiety, then his face brightened. She was surely the girl of the picture.

"What nonsense, Claude," she cried, "Mr. Bennett isn't dangerous—at least, he wasn't formerly. He wouldn't carry off a bride to be from the midst of her astonished relatives."

"Miss Aymer," cried Bennett, "do you know Evelyn Chester? For heaven's sake tell me."

Eileen laughed. "Know my college chum?" she exclaimed. "Know the girl who is to be my bridesmaid in two weeks? Well, rather."

"Where is she now?"

"She and her mother are spending the summer in a little village on the Massachusetts coast. They went there to be quiet after her father's death. I spent a week with them two months ago. Why Mr. Bennett, what in the world is the matter?"

Jack Bennett had sunk down upon a chair, his face very white, and had covered his eyes with his hand.

Then the story came out, and Eileen was greatly interested.

"Isn't it romantic?" she cried. "Evelyn has been so unlike herself all summer—she is usually the brightest, most cheerful girl in the world—but of course I laid the change to her father's death. She cried when I asked her to be my bridesmaid. It is all some unfortunate mistake. Well, it will soon be set right. She won't fly away before tomorrow."

It was late afternoon of the following day when Bennett walked down the strip of beach that he had first seen pictured on the canvas in Chicago. He had found Evelyn's mother, who had hidden him seek the girl in her favorite haunt on the beach. As he advanced it seemed to him that every object was fixed forever upon his memory.

Some distance ahead he caught the gleam of a woman's white gown. It was Evelyn. She was seated by the old boat, gazing out to sea with a world of thoughtful sadness in her eyes. She did not hear him until he spoke.

"Evelyn!"

She sprang to her feet with a little sobbing cry.

"Jack!"

Three days later, in the midst of their wanderings as to what had become of the letter that Evelyn had written and that Jack had never received, the following note arrived, and with it the lost letter:

"Mr. John Bennett," it ran, "Dear Sir—Pardon the unintentional delay of your mail. I am John I. Bennett; you are John J. Bennett. Make your letter was held for me six weeks in Denver. Very truly yours, J. I. B."

"So I should have found you after all," said Jack thoughtfully.

"Yes," answered Evelyn. "But it would have been so long."

Jack drew her head against his shoulder and looked down into her eyes.

"Dear," he said tenderly, "I wish I could shake hands with the man who saw in you a good subject for a moving picture."

Jack drew her head against his shoulder and looked down into her eyes.

The ABC and XYZ of ADVERTISING

A SERIES OF TEN TALKS ON ADVERTISING
Given by Seymour Eaton of Philadelphia No. 7

The advertising science is anything but exact. It is an easy matter to diagnose symptoms. But in advertising, as in medicine, very different causes produce very similar disturbances; eye strain, a wabby steamer deck, or green watermelon; each means an upset stomach.

But there are some broad general principles which are as permanent as the eternal hills.

Mouth to mouth talk is the great secret of popular advertising success. As a general rule people are short on talk. They are always running out. The hopper must be fed. The shrewd advertiser scores every time he produces a new topic of conversation. If he fails to make people talk about his goods he makes them talk about himself. They wash with his soap or drink his tea or rub on his axle grease just to get in touch with him.

Talk can be created about the most commonplace things; baked beans or tooth powder or linen collars. You need only to know what switch to turn on.

Human nature has not differed for six thousand years; but the point of view is constantly changing.

If the people remained the same; if business conditions remained the same; if society and the weather remained the same, then the advertising of last year would apply this year. But it doesn't. The point of view is different. We are in a continuous turmoil of change. The successful advertiser must live right up even with the clock. Advertise every day to meet the conditions of today. An advertisement that made a big hit last year may fall flat and dead this year. There is in everything a fullness of time; a season when the fruit is ripe; periods when all conditions seem to lend themselves to success. The advertiser must have discernment sharp enough and vision clear enough to know the year and the month and the day of the month in which the people are not only living, but in which they are thinking.

Make goods or entertainment or social position hard to obtain or scarce in amount and then it is that people fall over each other in the mad rush to see somebody else get left. The moment you put up the bars and say "Don't!" then it is that people want to climb. The sweetest apples in your neighbor's orchard are those on the tree nearest the dog.
